Summarize Project Accomplishments: See attached Document for show details

We applied for a Grant this year for the primary purpose of providing educational events to the public. One of the Arizona Raptor Center's (ARC) primary goals is to educate the public about raptors and the environment. During these educational events the attendees learnt about how raptors fit into the ecosystem, what raptors eat, where they live, and general information about raptors. Our falconers were there to answer any questions. The events showcase beautiful raptors from four different continents. We have eagles, hawks, owls, and falcons that support the educational experience for participants. With the lifting of covid restrictions we put the outreach program into high gear. We set setting up programs all over the state. We strived to have 2 shows a month. We participated in small events like campground presentations to larger shows like the Payson Rodeo. We were able to reach a wide variety of people. The ARC is responsible for education materials, providing one or more falconers to deliver the education program and manage the raptors. ARC is also responsible for caring for the raptors used in education programs including food, shelter, flight exercise, cages and all sorts of falconry equipment used to manage the raptors for educational purposes. ARC transports our raptors to each educational event. The raptors used in our educational events are often the main attraction drawing the public in to talk with us about raptors, the environment and conservation. At other events we were among several presenters, like experts on animal calling, or gun safety, those who help to educate our conservation-minded people and how important raptors are to our ecosystem. See a pictorial representation of the events in the attached documents.

To provide science based education and resources to promote wildlife conservation and environmental awareness. To conduct educational and humane scientific research to aid with the conservation of raptors both in America and world-wide, and to provide world-class care along with comprehensive medical care to raptors so they may be returned to their natural habitats and once again become an integral part of the environment.

What to do if you find a sick / injured raptor:

Call Arizona Raptor Center at (602) 549-8482. Raptors are birds of prey and can be dangerous to handle so we recommend leaving the raptor where it is until a trained falconer can arrive to handle the raptor. If you feel the raptor is in immediate danger, take precautions to avoid being injured and place the raptor in a closed box or crate at room temperature.

About us

Rehabilitation

The Arizona Raptor Center uses falconers and falconry techniques to aid in the recovery of sick and injured birds of prey, and to increase the probability of a successful release. We handle raptors in the ways of the traditional falconer and utilize techniques that have been honed over the 3,000+ year history of falconry. Working with experts in the fields of both falconry and avian medicine, we strive to minimize their stay in captivity, we work to ensure muscle mass is maintained or rebuilt, and if necessary, we fly some birds prior to their release to ensure their physical condition and hunting skills are adequate for return to the wild.

About us

Education

In addition to rehabilitating raptors, we have created a unique program to help educate the conservation-minded public. We reach out to the community with quality education programs, showing them how birds of prey are important to the environment and the existence of all creatures on this earth, and how a well-balanced eco-system is the solution. We assist the public in their understanding of how to co-exist with wild raptors in urban, suburban, and rural settings.

To schedule an educational event send an email to azraptorcenter@gmail.com

About us

Research

Additional skills are brought to the Arizona Raptor Center with falconers who have degrees in biology. Based on funding, they, along with other volunteers, will conduct field studies in such areas as:

- The effect of lead on the Arizona raptor population
- Habitat loss
- Muscle mass loss in captivity
- Tracking success of released rehabilitated raptors

The Arizona Raptor Center evaluates each raptor that comes into the Center, looking for clues as to what may be happening in various Arizona ecosystems. This understanding will also extrapolate to other parts of the United States and potentially the world. Our goal is to be able to address the challenges faced by birds of prey in the ever changing landscape of our modern world.
