

Have you ever played chess? Do you know anything about it?

For the record, sportsmen and women, hunters, anglers, shooters and outdoor recreationists are in a chess game, even though some of you may not realize it.

Chess is a game of strategy and thinking ahead. You don't want to lose your King or Queen if at all possible, but you may lose some chess pieces in the process.

We have to minimize our losses. We must be knights and bishops protecting the "Royalty"; the Kings and Queens (hunting, angling, shooting, wildlife management, etc.)

The anti-hunters, anti-anglers, animal rightists and enviro-litigants despise all we do. Yes, as some among us suggest, they are chipping away at our passions, no argument there.

But what is our end game?

Predator contests are on the table right now. Predator hunters are not happy. I don't blame them. For the record, I can't personally defend the contests, however I can defend predator management and predator hunting.

Yes there is a social component at play here, but folks, if we aren't playing the wildlife management chess game smart and strategically, we're going to be done in a few moves. Whether we like it or not, the social piece has become a major component of the "game".

A couple of years ago, many of us suggested the non-hunting public made up approximately 60-70% of the voters. If "we" made up 20% of the voting populace, and by some miracle all our like minded friends voted, we would still need 30-40% of the non-hunting public to vote with us.

Maricopa County was once again named the fastest growing county in the United States, and I would venture to say the majority of those new residents do not hunt or fish. So do you think we have some education hurdles ahead of us?

Back to the contests - who will buck up the money to defend them, or fight them? National groups? Most of them were AWOL when we were dealing with the wildcat ballot initiative last year. The list of organizations that ponied up funds to fight HSUS on that issue was pretty small.

I am not advocating that we cast off portions of our outdoor passions, but I am suggesting we be smart about what we like to do, what we can do and what's important that we need to save.

The AZ Game & Fish Commission has proposed a rule change that would eliminate contests, which it defines as a "competition among participants where participants must register or record entry and pay a fee and prizes or cash are awarded to winning or successful participants".

By doing this, they are maintaining their authority over all wildlife management, are continuing to manage predators, and are continuing to afford hunters the opportunity to hunt predators.

In my opinion, the elimination of contests as proposed by the Commission is a much more palatable solution than losing predator management and predator hunting altogether by some other means.

I'll suggest a legislative solution, which we've heard was imminent if the Commission didn't act, is not an option we would want to see, like in NM, NV and OR.

I'll also suggest we do not want an anti hunting group to come up with a ballot initiative that might not only eliminate contests, but might take predator management and predator hunting with it at the same time. The non-hunting public might fail to recognize any differences!

You still have time to let the Commission know what you think. Here is the proposed Rule, (page 6, item 4 i), Notice of Proposed Rulemaking. You can also find it here: www.azgfd.gov/rulemaking. You can email your comments to rulemaking@azgfd.gov or mail them to AZGFD, Attn: Rules Section, 5000 W. Carefree Highway, Phoenix, AZ 85086. The deadline to comment is May 12th.

We all need to begin looking strategically at the big picture here. And like the game of chess, we need to be thinking ahead with our next moves.

We can no longer afford to simply react to the anti's next target, we have to mitigate and eliminate their perceived opportunities.

That's the view from here.

Yours in Conservation,
Jim Unmacht Executive Director

Competing Against the World

Olympians in the sport of Biathlon, Tracy and Lanny Barnes competed together in Torino, Italy in 2006 and Lanny competed in Vancouver, Canada in 2010 where Tracy was the alternate. Lanny posted the best U.S. finish in 16 years for the U.S. women at those Olympic Games and both ladies made history and inspired the world when Tracy selflessly gave Lanny her spot on the Sochi, Russia 2014 Olympic team after Lanny fell ill during the final trials and wasn't able to complete all the races. Tracy was given the United Nations UNESCO International Fair Play award and the U.S. Olympic Committee Inspiration Award for her selfless act and for demonstrating true Olympic Spirit.

The "Twin Biathletes" grew up skiing in the mountains of Colorado and shooting small bore competitions as well as hunting and fishing. They combined their skills of skiing and shooting and claim that biathlon has made them better shooters and hunters while shooting and hunting has made them better biathletes as they are able to accurately shoot a rifle with a heart rate of 180 BPM and effortlessly pursue elk above 10,000 ft.

Tracy and Lanny have been competing in 3-gun competitions and have goals of not only becoming the top women 3-gun shooters in the nation, but also want to be competitive against the men as well. Tracy and Lanny also run a firearms training institute called T.O.P. Shooting Institute, otherwise known as "The Olympian Project", where they teach military, law enforcement, competitive shooters, and hunters how to shoot with an elevated heart rate and under stress. After developing the skills necessary to shoot while under extreme physical and mental stress for the past 15 years, they want to share these unique skills and what they have learned with others. The twins spend a majority of their free time traveling around to schools, Boys & Girls Clubs, 4-H clubs, Boys & Girls Scouts, etc., talking to them about following their dreams, setting goals, and leading a healthy active lifestyle.
